ELECTRONIC SERVICE DELIVERY INFORMED CONSENT

Electronic Service Delivery is defined as mental health therapy in any form offered or rendered primarily by electronic or technology assisted approaches when the mental health clinician and the client are not located in the same place during delivery of services. You will always have the opportunity to ask any questions that you have about the therapy, electronic communications in general, and other issues involving your treatment.

As a client receiving mental health services through electronic service delivery methods, you should understand:

- 1) This service is provided by technology (including but not limited to video, phone, text, and email) and may or may not involve direct, face to face, communication. There are benefits and limitations to this service. You will need access to, and familiarity with, the appropriate technology to participate in the service provided. Exchange of information may not be direct, and any paperwork exchanged will likely be exchanged through electronic means or through postal delivery. While telehealth is a useful tool in accessing care, it may be deemed necessary for you to come to an in-office visit.

- 2) As a mental health clinician licensed in Ohio, we may only deliver services to people located in Ohio unless we obtain a license or am allowed to practice in the state where the person is located. If you plan on leaving Ohio for any length of time in the future, please let us know as soon as possible so that we can make proper arrangements for future work or referrals, as appropriate. If you are going to be out of state during therapy, then we will have to comply with the licensing laws of the state where you will be located.

- 3) If a need for direct, face to face services arises, it is your responsibility to contact providers in your area, or to contact this office for a face-to-face appointment. You understand that an opening may not be immediately available.

- 4) You may decline any electronic service delivery service at any time without jeopardizing your access to future care, services, and benefits.

- 5) These services rely on technology, which allows for greater convenience in service delivery. There are risks in transmitting information over the internet or through other electronic services that include, but are not limited to, breaches of confidentiality, theft of personal information, and disruption of service due to technical difficulties. We will regularly reassess the appropriateness of continuing to deliver services through the use of technology. When using these services, you agree to accept the risks involved with the unencrypted exchange of information, if it is provided in that way.

6) Your provider will need to verify your identity in a face-to-face meeting, which may be via video/audio electronically and then verify your identity in subsequent sessions. At the initial session we will address imposter concerns. You should be aware that misunderstandings are possible with telephone, text-based modalities (e.g., email), and real-time internet chat, since non-verbal cues are relatively lacking. Even with video chat software, since bandwidth may be limited and images may lack detail, misunderstandings may occur. Your provider will gather information from your body language, vocal inflection, eye contact, and other non-verbal cues. Cultural differences and how they affect non-verbal cues may also be involved and will be assessed in whether or not this type of therapy is appropriate for your cultural experiences, your specific therapeutic issues and your environment. If work is being done with families or groups with different levels of technology competence, power dynamics will be acknowledged. Please let us know if you have any type of audio/visual or cognitive impairment prior to beginning treatment. If you have never engaged in online care, you need to have patience with the process and request clarification if you believe that you are not being understood by your provider or you do not understand something that is said. Your clinician will regularly review whether or not electronic service delivery is meeting the goals of therapy. We will also discuss with you how to handle disruptions in services and will discuss with you all methods of delivering services that are compliant with commonly accepted standards of technology safety and security at the time at which services are rendered.

7) In emergencies, in the event of disruption of service, or for routine or administrative reasons, it may be necessary to communicate by other means:

a) In emergency situations: If it is an imminent situation that requires face-to-face contact call 911 or go to the nearest emergency room. If it can be managed over the phone, you can call the office but if we do not respond immediately or within a short period of time, you should contact local emergency services (for example, call 911 or go to your local hospital's emergency room, or call the National Suicide Prevention Hotline number -1-800-273-8255.) Also, other local hotline crisis phone numbers may be available to call, and you can check on the internet to find those.

b) Should service be disrupted: Try to regain contact using the same medium. If that does not work, attempt to make contact by calling the office, patient portal messaging or e-mail. We will also make every effort to regain contact. If service is disrupted during a session before the pre-agreed time frame has ended, you will have the opportunity to use the remaining time as soon as contact is made. If contact is not re-established within one hour, you will have the choice to end the session and be charged a pro-rated amount or allowed to schedule an additional session to use the remaining time.

c) For other communication: You and your clinician may agree to communicate via a phone call, videoconferencing, e-mail, text, fax, or mailed letters.

8) The potential benefits of online services include flexibility in scheduling and allowing you to engage in counseling outside of the office, which eliminates issues like transportation and other psycho-social barriers that might make it difficult for you to handle in a traditional office setting. The provision of online counseling may include risks related to the technology used, the distance between you and the office, and issues related to timeliness. For example, the potential risk of confidentiality may pertain to your accessing the internet from public locations. You should consider the visibility of your screen and being overheard when in public settings. It is recommended that you be in a private setting when engaging in online counseling. You should also always use strong passwords to protect any information shared with us. Never use a work computer for telehealth as your employer may have access to the information shared in electronic communications. Be cautious when using a shared network with others.

9) Although the internet provides the appearance of anonymity and privacy in counseling, privacy is more of an issue online than it is in person. You are responsible for confidentiality in your own environment, including securing your hardware, internet access points, chat software, email, and passwords. Please develop passwords that are appropriate and strong and not use autofill for user names or passwords. Although we will take steps to protect your information, we will have policies in effect to notify you of a breach of any of your confidential information which is required to be reported to you.

10) We may utilize alternative means of communication in the following circumstances: if you do not respond to text, we may attempt to call you. If you do not respond to a call, we may follow up with text or e-mail. If you do not respond to a call, text, or e-mail, we may follow up with a mailed letter. In case of emergency (or concerns over your welfare), we may contact your emergency contact if you have provided one.

11) Your clinician will attempt to respond to communications and routine messages within 48 hours if available.

12) It appears that most Ohio insurance companies are reimbursing for telehealth sessions. However, you should check with your insurance company to determine if they will reimburse you for electronic service delivery sessions. If insurance does not cover reimbursement, then you agree to pay the fee for the service.

13) You need to take the following precautions to ensure that your communications are directed only to our office or other individuals: Ensure that you use the correct e-mail address, telephone number, skype or online name, fax number, and physical address to contact the appropriate individuals. Only leave voice messages after ensuring that the correct phone number was dialed, and the voicemail introduction identifies the correct individual.

14) Your communications exchanged with us, if capable of being put into written form, will be stored in the following manner: e-mails, texts, and other electronic communication relevant to treatment will be printed and kept in your file. Mailed letters and documents will also be kept in your file. Notes outlining electronic service delivery treatment sessions will be written and kept in your file. Your file will be kept in a locked file cabinet or stored electronically and will be accessible only by those who require or are allowed access and will be available to you or someone named by you for the length of time required under Ohio law. We will not record sessions without first discussing it with you and obtaining your permission to do that. Please see our regular Informed Consent form for information on access to your records, including who will have access to them.

15) The laws, ethics, and professional standards that apply to in-person therapeutic services also apply to services delivered by electronic means. This document does not replace other agreements, contracts, or documentation of informed consent covering other issues. If you want licensing information on your nurse practitioner or other information regarding professionals with licenses, you can find it at the Ohio Board of Nursing's website at www.nursing.ohio.gov.
